Demand for greater privacy in public restrooms has been a long time coming.

What is privacy? For many it brings to mind ‘a retreat, seclusion, solitude’. While most might not associate those terms with public restrooms, there is no question that privacy is becoming more important to everyone who uses those spaces.

This need for privacy is not new. According to the classic study on restroom design, The Bathroom by Alexander Kira, Americans have been uncomfortable with the lack of privacy in the restroom as far back as the 60s! And just like their parents and possibly grandparents, today’s high school students revealed that greater privacy surrounding restroom stalls is the top improvement they’d like to see in their school restrooms.

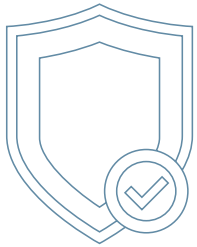

Taking cues from European influence, Bradley privacy partitions give owners and architects the options to create a comfortable, durable restroom retreat for users.

Extra Depth Panels

Adding additional depth to stalls is a great way to increase feelings of privacy.

Our stacked panel design features an aluminum H bracket that provides a cleaner design aesthetic and is easy to install.

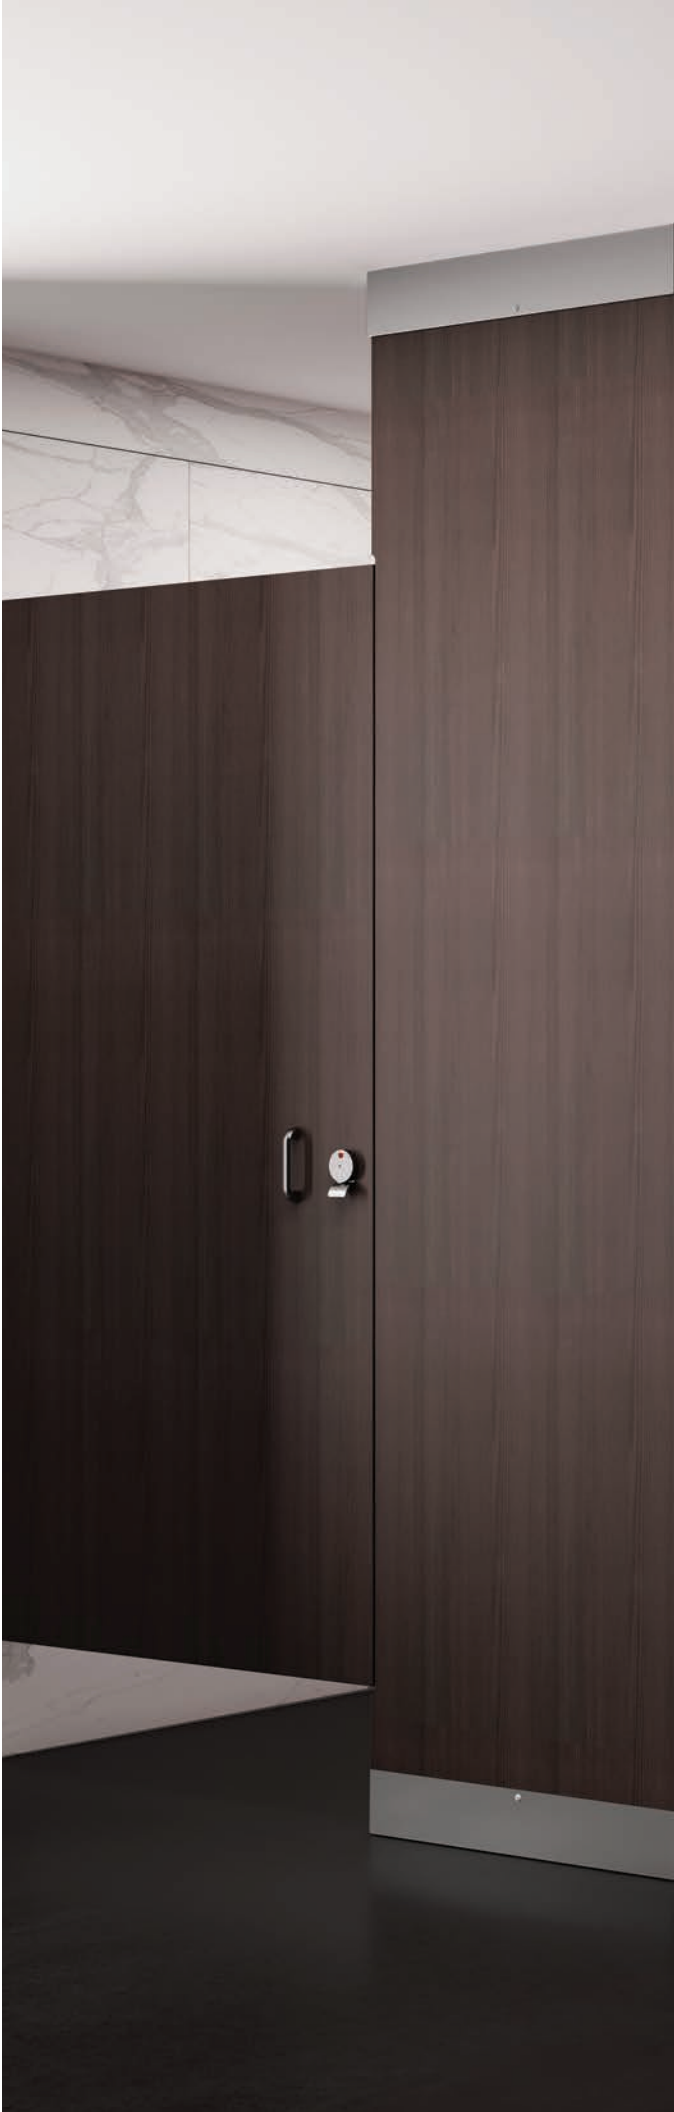

Perfect for airports and hotel lobbies where extra space for luggage is a must, or malls and amusement parks where parents need the extra space to care for small children.

STACKED PANEL DESIGN

The stacked panel design is standard when the depth exceeds the following:

Bradmar™	58" (1474 mm) to face
Stainless Steel	61" (1550 mm) to face
Powder Coated	61" (1550 mm) to face
Phenolic Core	63" (1601 mm) or 75" (1905 mm) to face depending on color

NEW Phenolic partitions are available in extra height and extra depth panels with no H bracket for a seamless, Euro-inspired look. Available in select colors.
